ENLARGE CAMP FUNSTON

Carrying Out Plans Will Make it Largest Camp in U. S.

Camp Funston, Kan., Sept. 18.—Plans for the enlargement of Camp Funston national army cantonment for the training for the eighty-ninth division, which will make it the largest mobilization camp in the United States were received today by Captain Fred J. Herman, constructing quartermaster.

The present plan of the cantonment calls for an accommodation of approximately 47,000 men, while the enlarged camp will provide for 60,000. The divisional headquarters will be increased by the new plans. Special quarters will be erected for the foreign officers who are to come to the cantonment as instructors, and more barracks, more officers' quarters and regimental exchanges are to be added to the camp.

Army officers are of the opinion that because of the increased accommodations 60,000 men will be sent to Camp Funston before the entire number of the first quota is completed.

TO HAVE BEAUTY SPOT ON SECOND AND CENTRAL

The city commissioners have given permission to the residents in the neighborhood of the conjunction of Second street and Central avenue at County street, to make a beauty spot in the triangular plot of ground at that place. The city will curb the plot and pipe the water to it and the citizens will do the rest.

There are a number of these triangular pieces of ground in town which are good for nothing else and public spirited citizens could make the town more attractive by putting in flower beds in these waste places.

PEOPLE SPEAK WELL OF CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS

"I have been selling Chamberlain's Tablets for about two years and heard such good reports from my customers that I concluded to give them a trial myself, and can say that I do not believe there is another preparation of the kind equal to them, writes G. ### HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The students and teachers were glad to have with them last week for a short visit Kenneth Wright, Viola McFadden, Mildred Callaway, Eva Dunneagan and Walter Ackerson.

Athletics are looming up on the campus now. Each evening will find about 20 athletes getting in shape for our first contest in football. Our boys are not large but with the team working like a machine we look forward to victories. The tennis courts are being worked over for those who indulge in lighter forms of exercise.

Students for the most part are taking their work seriously and doing good work. However, there are those also who are not working and need to be stirred up somewhat. We expect the parents to co-operate with us in keeping the boy and girl working so that in the end there will be no disappointments.

The debating society will be revived soon and the boys will be given a chance to develop their faculties of persuasion. This, until recently, has been a neglected part of high school work.

Supt. Hale took charge of some English classes last Friday. The English teacher was absent on account of sickness.

There is to be a lecturer with us one evening in the near future. Let's all watch for announcements.

The various classes are engaged in a contest of bringing books to augment the library. The class bringing in the largest number of books is to be duly rewarded.

Rev. Koontz will conduct chapel exercises on Friday at High school.

LOYAL BEREANS PICNIC AT THE ICE PLANT

The Loyal Bereans, Sunday school class of the Christian Church, assembled at the church Tuesday evening and went to the ice plant, picnicking.

When they arrived a bonfire was built and the young ladies prepared supper consisting of some of the most delicious sandwiches and other dainties the writer ever had the privilege of eating and to say that all partook heartily is useless.

They were, indeed, a happy crowd of young folks, those Bereans, and if you, Mr. Reader, had been a stranger amongst them you would have admitted that you never felt more at home.

When asked their names for publication, they decided to give some humorous ones, saying: "If anyone wants to know our names let them come to Sunday school. We meet in the west end of the church every Sunday morning." The writer is going!

The names they gave are as follows: Malinda Hopkins, Jan Jones, Sallie Annie Smith, Marildie Brown, Ex-cema Fitzpatrick, Sue Grimes, Liz Samboah, Bill Savage, Johnnie Green and Tank Hippockets.

When the young folks started home it was 9:30 o'clock and very dark. Dark? No. It might have been, but there was enough sunshine in that group of young Sunday school workers to illumine the way for a thousand drifting souls.

And thus the evening was spent.

ONE PRESENT.

Birthday Party.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Amber was the scene of a jolly affair Saturday evening, when their daughter, Miss Maizy, celebrated her birthday by giving a party for a number of her friends.

The nature of the party was a fake field meet, and everything was carried out in yellow and white. Yellow and white flowers decorated the house. Miss Ruby Waite, who wore a pretty white dress, presided over the punch bowl which had yellow and white flowers arranged around it.

The guests chose captains and each side contested for the games in the field meet. The first game was to make hats out of crepe paper. When they were finished they put them on, then marched by music in front of the judges who awarded the prizes. Miss Jessie Belle Wilson made the prettiest white hat while Miss Winnie Taylor made the prettiest yellow and each was given white and yellow corsage bouquets as prizes. Other comical games were played such as reciting poetry in a sing-song voice, chewing string with candy attached to one end and a suit case race and others.

The side that won the most points was served first. The refreshments which consisted of ice cream and cake, carried out the same color note. When Miss Maizy was served she found a box by her plate tied with a yellow ribbon. Upon opening it she found a beautiful cameo ring, a present from the guests.

The closing minutes of the evening were spent in playing and singing.

Those present numbered Misses Jessie Belle Wilson, Ruth Sizer, Mary Burke, Ethel Amber, Lola Smith, Jessie Hall, Pauline Mansfield, Yolande Gillette, Helen Davis, Lucille Baity, Isabelle Johnson, Winnie Taylor, Gladys Solomon, Ruby Waite, Messrs. ### HOME-READING COURSE FOR CITIZEN-SOLDIERS

The Team Leaders.

Most of the men in the Army are private soldiers. Their work is of the greatest importance and deserves all the respect and praise which it receives. A great many men in the National Army, however, will be ambitious to rise to higher ranks. They will find plenty of encouragement and of opportunities for promotion.

If you are one of those men, don't allow yourself to forget the fact that you can win promotion only by proving your fitness in each duty intrusted to you. It is a rare case when a man is "jumped" several ranks ahead. As a rule, he climbs from one rank to the next higher rank after having demonstrated in each position his intelligence, honor and reliability. Even as a private, you may win advancement to the grade known as first class privates. About one-fourth of the privates in each company may be given the rating "first-class" which means in substance that they are regarded as skilled and trustworthy soldiers.

Noncommissioned Officers.

From the first-class privates are usually chosen the corporals. These are the squad leaders. They are appointed by the commanding officer of the regiment on the recommendation of the commanding officer of the company. In addition to the regularly appointed corporals each company may have one lance corporal. This is a temporary appointment made by the company commander for the purpose of testing the ability of some private whom he is thinking of recommending for permanent appointment. In case the lance corporal does not make a good showing or for any other reason, he may be returned to the ranks when the commander of the company sees fit.

Next above the corporal in rank comes the sergeant. There are usually 9 to 11 sergeants in a company unless a sergeant has some other duty assigned to him, he is normally the leader of a platoon. There are, however, many special duties constantly assigned to sergeants. The first sergeant (in Army slang, the "top sergeant") for example, keeps certain company records, forms the company in ranks, transmits orders from the company commander, and performs many other important tasks. The supply sergeant sees to bringing up supplies of all kinds to the company. The mess sergeant looks after food. The stable sergeant is responsible for the proper care of horses and mules. The color sergeant carries the national or regimental colors. There are many other grades within the rank of sergeant which can not be described here. You will gradually become familiar with them during your army experience.

Commissioned Officers.

Sergeants and corporals are known as noncommissioned officers, because they are appointed by their regimental commanding officer. Officers of higher ranks are known as commissioned, since they hold their rank by virtue of a commission issued to them under authority of the President of the United States. The commissioned officer is thus on quite a different footing from the "noncom" (noncommissioned officer). He obtains his rank and authority from a higher source. He is treated with respect which is of a different character from that extended to a noncommissioned officer. This is one of the fundamental things in Army organization.

Lowest in rank among the commissioned officers is the second lieutenant. Above him comes the first lieutenant and above him the captain. These are the three "company officers." The captain is ordinarily the commanding officer of a company, while the lieutenants might be described as assistant captains. In the absence or disability of the captain, however, the first lieutenant takes his place and has full command, and in the absence or disability of both the second lieutenant takes the command.

Next above the captain is the major, whose proper command is a battalion. A step higher is the lieutenant colonel and above him the colonel, the commanding officer of the regiment. The lieutenant colonel ordinarily assists the colonel and in his absence takes the command. In case both the lieutenant colonel and the colonel are disabled or absent the senior major takes the command.

The General Officers.

Above the colonel is the brigadier general, whose proper command is a brigade. Above the brigadier general is the major general, the highest rank at present held by any officer of the American Army.

One general, however, serves as Chief of Staff of the Army. As such he supervises all troops and departments of the military service. He in turn reports to the Secretary of War. The Secretary of War in his turn acts under the general direction of the president of the United States, who is the Commander in Chief.

The chain of authority reaches in an unbroken line all the way from the President to the newest recruit. If the President chooses to give an order which in any way affects the recruit, it passes through the Secretary of War, Chief of Staff, major general, brigadier general, colonel, major, captain, sergeant, and possibly corporal until the recruit is reached and the order obeyed.

Ordinarily the most general instructions are issued by the higher officers. The manner in which these instructions shall be carried out is left to the judgment of the officers in closer contact with the troops and with a more intimate knowledge of the conditions under which they are working.

MORE JUVENILE

COURTS NEEDED

In a recent bulletin the state board of charities and corrections makes a plea for more juvenile courts in Missouri. Every county should have one, it is argued, even if limited funds make it impossible to allow maximum compensation for probation officers.

The entry of the United States into the war may mean extra reasons for these courts, for it has happened in Germany that the amount of juvenile delinquency has increased remarkably since the outbreak of hostilities. Whether this is due to the absence of so many heads of families, or helpful big brothers, or to some other reason, is uncertain, but the possibility of an increased tendency in this direction in this country is enough to make an agitation for more juvenile courts timely.

The purpose of a juvenile court, ideas concerning which are a little hazy to many persons, are well expressed in this bulletin, as follows:

"The first function of the court in co-operating with other social activities is to re-enforce the family and to help emancipate it from the conditions which cause it to fail. The work of the court should be to emphasize the education and developmental rather than the judicial or correctional methods.

"The court must not be concerned exclusively, nor perhaps even primarily, with the facts brought to its attention concerning the conduct of individuals, but must look to the circumstances and to the social influences from which these facts have arisen. No offending child should be brought to the court unless he is obviously in a delinquent state. The juvenile court should be concerned with the state or condition of delinquency rather than an act of offense committed in violation of the law. The important fact is not that the child has violated the law, but that he is in need of care, education and protection at the hands of the state. The question of the juvenile court is, Why is the child bad? Until this is answered correctly the court can give the child no more intelligent assistance than can a physician who attempts to treat a patient without adequate knowledge of the pathology underlying the ailment."—Joplin Globe.
